BEARCATS SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER

Bassano and Strathmore Each Win a Game in Double Header Baseball Feature at Neighboring Town—Will Play Two Games Here Next Sunday.

In a double header baseball feature at Strathmore last Sunday the Bassano Beacats lost the first game 4-16 and won the second 9-7.

Errors and timely hitting in the second inning of the first game cost the Beacats ten runs and gave Strathmore a long lead that could not be overcome. Bulmer was pulled out in the third inning and Connolly pitched the rest of the game. Strathmore getting 5 runs off him. After the fatal second inning the Beacats tightened up their defense and played better ball.

Bulmer pitched well in the second game which the Beacats took 9-7. This was a better exhibition of baseball, and the Bassano team gave their pitcher better support. By this victory the Beacats broke the winning streak of the Strathmore team who had eighteen consecutive wins to their credit. Out of twenty games played this season the Strathmore team have won eighteen. They have a powerful team with a line-up of good hitters and an infield and an outfield that works like clockwork. In the second game they made a good start with four runs in the first inning, but Bulmer allowed only three more runs. The Beacats did not get going until the fifth when they ran for four tallies off six hits.

Brooks To Have Fourth Gas Well

Announcement that the gas company will drill another well in the town of Brooks is published in this week's issue of the Brooks Bulletin. For many years the town was supplied with natural gas from two wells. About a year ago a third well was drilled to augment the lessening flow from the other two wells. The third well yielded only a small supply of gas, and now the company will drill a fourth well to meet the needs of the community.

Brooks is not in the big gas field,

Record Time Across Two Oceans

Around half the world in 17 days, Londoner is the record of Miss D. Bewley, of London, en route to join her uncle Allan Cameron, Oriental manager of the Canadian Pacific, Hong Kong, who left Vancouver July 18 on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada. Miss Bewley, in company with Lady Lindley, wife of Sir Francis Lindley, the British ambassador in Japan and other through passengers, left Southampton July 8 arrived in Quebec July 18 on the new Empress of Britain, was reached by Montreal by boat train where she boarded the Imperial Limited for Vancouver. Reaching Vancouver July 16 at 11.15 she boarded the Empress of Canada, thus obtaining direct connection to the Orient. Combination of the Empress of Britain's fast time across the Atlantic and the Empress of Canada's fast time over the Pacific makes this the fastest trip on record between London and the Orient by way of Canada and Honolulu.

Gem Stampede Attracts A Good Sized Crowd

Horse Race, Bucking, Calf Riding, Provide Thrills for the Crowd—Full Day's Program Run Off With a Hit—Gem Stampede Not Affected by Depression

Attracted by a splendid program of horse racing, cowboy events, and athletics, a large crowd of people from many points in Bow Valley gathered to attend the annual Gem stampede.

In spite of the depression which prevails throughout the west, the people of Gem did not allow their enthusiasm to wane this year, and put on a splendid stampede and sports day that was a most creditable event. The whole day's program was well prepared and every event was keenly contested and provided the crowd with excellent entertainment.

The list of prize winners is as follows:
Bucking with saddle, 1. Coney Paterson, Gadsby; 2. Eddie Watrin, High River; 3. Cecil Young, Brooks; 4. Bucking, barbed, 1. Coney Paterson, Gadsby and Pat Lafontaine, of Medicine Hat, split first and second money.

Free for all race, 1. Mark Spring Chief, Gleditch; 2. M. Atkins, Gem. Relay race, 1. M. Atkins; 2. Joe Bear Robe, Gleditch.

Walk, trot, and ran race, 1. Ralph but a fair amount of gas was found in the porous rocks tapped by the first two wells. The company hopes to get sufficient for all requirements in the well they are about to drill. It is planned to complete the well before the coming winter.

NEW GRASS FOR WESTERN PRAIRIE

Minister Points Out It Is More Palatable Than Other Varieties

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.—The prairies are to have a new forage grass, the green wheat grass, which may have as far-reaching an effect on the west as the development of new types of wheat has had. It is the result of years of breeding various strains of grasses to provide a variety which will be better than any other for fodder purposes. Prof. L. B. Kirk, formerly of the University of Saskatchewan and now Dominion agronomist, has been responsible for developing this grass. After years of trials and experiments this variety was put through several tests this summer and those were so successful that it may well play a big part in the development of livestock raising in the west.

Feed Values
In making the announcement Wednesday Hon. Robt. Weir, minister of agriculture, referred to the advantages this grass has over others in use in the prairies. It is more palatable than any of the other grasses. It is high in feed values. It comes earlier in the spring than any other grass in the west. In fact, being green under the snow. In the test this summer created wheat grass cut nine times and still remained green and full of sap. Its roots are twice the depth of rye grass and side by side with rye grass in a field this summer created wheat grass was firmly rooted whereas rye grass was easily kicked out.

Professor Kirk is regarded, Mr. Weir said, as one of the three leaders on this continent on forage crops. He is being brought into the department particularly to investigate the breeding of grasses to repair the pastures of British Columbia as well as eastern Canada, in addition to the development of the green wheat grass to prevent drifting in the prairie provinces and enable the farmers there to be more nearly self supporting on their own farms.

Wheat crops which promised only a light yield this year because of drought early in the growing season have been further restricted, during the past two weeks by hot winds.

The best yields now expected from wheat on non-irrigated lands in the vicinity of Hussar are from 12 bushels per acre. Yields will range downward from this figure to 5 or less bushels per acre, and a few fields sown on stable ground will not be worth cutting.

Cutting of wheat is expected to start about the middle of next week if warm weather prevails to ripen the grain. The past few days have been cool and have retarded ripening, but the grain has almost reached the point of maturity where it can be handled by the combine.

Irrigation farmers are preparing to harvest a good crop of grain. Fields that were well irrigated show a fine yield of wheat, and the yield will be good.

DUCK HUNTING SEASON IS LESS

Bag Limits Halved—Hunting Restricted to September 15 to Nov. 14 in Northern Alberta

EDMONTON.—A shorter time for shooting wild ducks and geese will be the order this year. Dates for the open season have been set by the provincial game department as from noon on Sept. 1 to and including Nov. 14 north of the Clearwater and Athabasca rivers, and from Sept. 15 to Nov. 14 south of those rivers. This is a shortening-up of one month as compared with last year.

The bag limit for ducks will be 16 a day in September, and 26 for the balance of the season, with a maximum of 100 birds for the season. In the case of geese the limit will be 10 a day, with a total of 30 for the season.

The restrictions this year are with a view to conservation of the bird supply, which has been showing signs of depletion. Saskatchewan and Alberta have had similar restrictions, while there is a movement in some of the states across the line to make still further cuts. It having been considered that the W. C. Canada should be adopted. There is a possibility, according to B. Lawton, chief game commissioner, that joint action may be considered with the United States and the United States to shut down entirely on wild fowl shooting in 1932.

The Pictures

In "Just Imagine," a Fox Movietone musical romance coming to the Oxyphen Theatre Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week, the world of 1980 and a journey to Mars is timed.

Writers and scientists, down through the ages, have looked far off into space and regarded the great planet Mars with speculative eyes. Of all the great planets of the solar system Mars is the closest to earth and thus easiest to study through the powerful astronomical telescopes.

Mars, as imagined by this great picture's producers, differs from the conception of Verne and Wells and Burroughs in many important particulars. They have pictured the Martians as an exotic race of people, ruled over by a beautiful and voluptuous queen, with giant slaves at her feet. They are highly intelligent and skilled in the arts. One unusual peculiarity of their Martian race is that every Martian has a twin. One of the twins is always kind and gentle, but the other is vicious and brutal. During the visit of Mars, the Martians are engaged in a rocket plan the bad twins stage a revolution and gain control.

The Martian kingdoms were created by Rudy P. Brown, and H. H. Brown. The result is exotic and beautiful in the extreme, adding an imaginative quality to the production of a whole, and giving a wonderful setting for the love theme.

Greta Garbo in "Inspiration" is coming Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next week.

Life for British cabinet ministers these days is just one class after another.

Even government employees are no sure of their money these days. In New South Wales, Australia, the government could not meet its pay unless the loan council granted a substantial advance.

A few lines out Bobby becomes fearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to drink the expensive money each week as soon as it arrives, and Antonette Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach Denver, passing through Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis. Peter and Rowena have many tips on the way while Carter keeps writing Bobby to return to New York. The morning after their reach Denver, Peter and Rowena discover Bobby has deserted them and returned to New York by train. They are faced with the impossible condition of continuing their trip without her.

"Well, you're not chained there, are you? There's nothing to keep you from going out to the hotel in bed too. I'm not going to let a mere being in bed interfere with my professional future, am I? I'll let you downstairs in ten minutes."

And she hung up the receiver. Now on the whole, no one could have been more practical in things connected with business than Rowena. Her clothes were smart, for all their increasing shabbiness, but they were extremely well made and trim. Her hair was crisp and businesslike, and that something she didn't know just what prompted her to discard her chic sports costume that night, she pulled out the bottom of her bag and pulled out a soft and shiny little dinner gown of enticing line and beguiling color.

She put on her highest-heeled slippers. She got out looking like little blue braids and earrings and chains. And she accented her slimy sweetness with the flattering lines of a chiffon velvet scarf, deep and white and brilliant.

Kind of the world's successful business and professional men were average pupils in their school days, and some of the brilliant minds of today were regarded as dullards at school.

The child prodigy in school often descends to mediocrity after his years of tuition are passed. Witness the case of William J. Sidis.

At the age of six months he could read the alphabet. When he was but two years old he could read and write with ease, spell correctly, and carry on an intelligent conversation. By the time he was four he had mastered four languages. At six years of age he completed an entire grammar course in six months, and two years later he was graduated from the Brooklyn High School after completing the four-year course in half a year. He entered Harvard University at the age of 11. He was graduated with honors four years later. Sidis then took postgraduate work and became a teacher of mathematics. This boy wonder says John H. H. in his Strange As It Seems Illustrations, was discovered five years later running an adding machine in a New York store.

Parents whose children attain just an average standing in school rarely should not be aware of the fact that their boys and girls do not make a brilliant showing.

When Peter, waiting rather listlessly in the lobby of the hotel, first saw her floating toward him he could scarcely believe it was Rowena of the rumble seat. Her rouged lips smiled at his frank amazement and she took his hands in a powdery soft to the touch and faintly perfumed.

"Peter, darling," she said, "I don't have a gorgeous idea."

Peter's sulks took instant flight. "Good, Rowena, you're an exquisite! You're just ravishing! You must let me paint you like that. You're simply unbelievable!"

"Oh, but this is the real Rowena," she said with seductive sweetness. "You never saw me before. You know only a poor little woman, girl trying to earn her daily bread."

"I've just got to paint you like that!"

"You shall," she promised, smiling. "I suppose it's too late to do it now."

"I'm afraid so," Rowena drew a deep, deep breath. Something about it—something about her—made Peter think vaguely of a swimmer gliding cold and bold and bare, body poised motionless, for a distance plunges into icy water—Peter—you you are very sure you are not in love?"

"I will be," he assured her gaily. "If you look like this very often."

"I'm serious, Peter."
"No, I'm not in love."
"Absolutely?"
"Absolutely."

"Then Peter, how about this?" Another deep breath—another preliminary quiver of cold flesh and tingling as icy plunges. "You know marriage, don't you?"

"I've better come with me. It will look odd for me to go in alone and then come back for you."

Rowena got out. "Just be off-hand about it, Peter. I'm not a person of assumption of nonchalance, Rowena, taking seriously at his words."

"Got a couple of rooms?" he asked.

Why can't we don't you see what I mean? Why not just as ahead on the trip the way we are, and do the work, and get the money and everything—and just get married? That's all."

Peter hadn't remotely suspected what she had in mind until she brought the word out, struck him full in the face with it, as it were. And it pulled him right, shocked and resentful, like a strack man.

"Why, Rowena, that's the very nice of you—I suppose. But I really had never thought about—being married to you."

"Well," she interrupted tartly, if it comes to that, I can't think of anything in the world I'd like less than being married to you, either."

But she realized at once she was off on the wrong tack and quickly changed her method. "Of course, I'm not married. I know I know we don't get along very well together, and that's everything but in love, but I don't care."

"Yes, yes, yes, I know we don't get along very well together, and that's everything but in love, but I don't care."

"Oh, yes, he will. He wants to marry me himself. He'll answer us like the child of a man."

"But, Rowena," she began wretchedly.

"And, Peter, dear Peter," said Rowena, smiling, "I'm really a terribly nice person when I'm not working hard and worried about money. Ever and ever so many quite nice people are terribly anxious to be married to me. I dare say as a married couple we shall get along better than most. And we will be careful to get rooms on separate floors of the hotel and make the clerks give us a receipt making a note of it, so we can use it for evidence that we have never—never been—anything but just—well married, you know."

"That's enough, if you ask me," said Peter in a troubled voice.

"I'm terribly hungry," said Rowena. "Let's go down to that cunning little place the clerk told us about and have a sandwich or something. And you think it over. I had to think up some way out of it. Peter. We just couldn't chuck it out here—not here—not at the very front door of the Rocky Mountains. I couldn't bear it."

So they took a taxi and went down to the nice little place and Rowena didn't say a word about business, or money, or professions, or anything else.

Things, and smiled, and the beads show blue on her throat, and stars blue in the blue of her eyes, until she had changed it was a good idea of hers, and they would get it done first thing next morning.

After breakfast, next morning, Peter insisted upon having a portion of their dwindling expense money to buy a plain wedding ring. They had no trouble procuring the license, hurried directly to the office of the nearest justice and by twelve o'clock they were married.

Back in the hotel they turned abruptly away from each other as soon as they had their keys from the desk and went up to their rooms by separate elevators. And at one o'clock they were drawing out of Denver, headed north, both a little tired, a little excited and more than a little nervous.

If it was that night when they reached Cheyenne. The last twenty miles Peter drove slowly, creeping along as one who dreaded the arrival and when no amount of slowing down could postpone the inevitable he was plainly on edge.

"Not at all," said Rowena. "Just go right in and ask for two rooms on separate floors."

"You'd better come with me. It will look odd for me to go in alone and then come back for you."

Rowena got out. "Just be off-hand about it, Peter. I'm not a person of assumption of nonchalance, Rowena, taking seriously at his words."

"Got a couple of rooms?" he asked.

ed the clerk. "Yes, sir," said the clerk briskly. "On—on separate floors. I suppose said Peter hopefully.

"No—nothing," said the clerk. "No—nothing," began Peter, weakly.

But Rowena nudged him. "We'd rather have them—on—on different floors, if you don't mind," he stammered and his face grew red.

Great Railroad Has Fine Police Force

White gloves, part of their official dress, are especially appropriate to members of the Canadian Pacific Railway Police, not only for the smart touch thus added to their blue uniforms, but because they are emblematic of the force itself; an organization of spotless reputation and unflinching courtesy. Not only is this picked body of men, uniformed and ununiformed, the safeguard of the property of the world's greatest transportation system and its thousands of patrons, but its members are friends and mentors to countless travelers in all part of the Dominion. Wherever the company has an interest, be it a great terminal, a wharf or a vast freight yard, "the man in blue" is to be found. Many of the constables and their officers are ex-servicemen and at their head is Inspector-General E. de B. Panet, C.M.G., D.S.O., A.D.C., a distinguished Canadian soldier with a splendid record as a staff officer during the Great War. The force has won many trophies for first-aid work and also in revolver shooting, its Ontario team having captured the Canadian police revolver championship for the whole Dominion this year.
